Residents seek way to continue karate class

By Don Green

The Upland City Council Tuesday night heard a plea encouraging the city to find some way to reinstate a karate class canceled because insurance firms refuse to cover liability for any injuries during instruction.

Recreation Director Fred Taunton — whose department sponsored instruction 7-9 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays at Magnolia Recreation Center — said he learned Dec. 30 that the insurance companies would not cover karate in 1978.

The City Council adopted a plan of largely self - insurance at its meeting Dec. 19, but has retained private coverage in 1978 for any single claim over $75,000 and total claims, amounting to more than $300,000.

Three firms share the risk in coverage up to $5 million under Upland's new plan.

Taunton told the council he is searching for a company that will accept liability coverage for karate and other alternate ways to obtain coverage so the class may resume.

If coverage is found and the cost is not excessive, he said the class would be immediately reinstated. Taunton said the added cost would be passed along to karate students.

Roger Cummings of Montclair, who said his 15 - year - old daughter is a black belt in the class, presented the council with a petition bearing 149 signatures urging that the class be reinstated.

Instructor John Santiago said the ongoing course began in September 1972. The Recreation Department also sponsors an annual invitational karate tournament at Upland High School in April or May, Santiago noted.

The tournament would also be canceled unless insurance is found. Cummings said 55 students attend the class.

Taunton explained that the insurance firms decided not to cover karate during 1978 because recent large suits elsewhere have led them to consider the sport a "high risk."

The recreation director said Santiago conducts a disciplined class where injuries are unlikely.

After the meeting, Santiago said there has never been a serious injury in a class session during the five years he has been the instructor. He added, however, one student did sustain a head injury during unsupervised sparring following a class session.

Joanne Mahoney — instructor of a woman's self - defense class with the Recreation Department — said Santiago's course should be continued because the class she teaches provides instruction just to females 11 years and older.

She said boys and younger girls also need to learn self - defense.

"Especially the boys — they get molested just as much as girls," Miss Mahoney said.

Benjamin Lara, a student who assists Santiago with karate instruction, said he sees more violence from a girls' soccer team he coaches. He told the council his 7 - year - old son is one of the students. Lara explained students never spar without a black belt holder present to supervise.

Rom Hamer, the father of two students in the program, suggested the class be allowed to continue but without contact allowed during the time Upland searches for insurance.

City Attorney Donald Maroney said the city probably would not risk the possibility of a suit stemming from the class during a period it was uninsured for karate.

Santiago said the lack of insurance may delay plans to start a new class for black belts this month.

In other action, the council passed an ordinance revising sewer rental charges in line with federal mandates that residents not assume an unfair share of the burden compared to commercial and industrial users.

A revised rate schedule has been adopted by the Chino Basin Municipal Water District, which serves Upland and other West End cities.

Agency determines local health needs

By Don Green

A largely unnoticed group is assessing the health - care needs in the West End to prepare a five - year plan that Congress hopes will help keep down medical costs.

The West End Task Force is surveying the health needs of residents of Rancho Cucamonga, Montclair, Ontario, Upland and Chino under broad guidelines and its recommendations could weigh heavily in determining what services, facilities and equipment will be added or expanded in the next five years.

Hans Wiik — chairman of the task force and associate administrator at San Antonio Community Hospital in Upland — said the group has designated short- and long - term priorities for a list of health needs.

Among concerns the task force named as immediate priorities were venereal disease education and clinic, child and female abuse (including rape) prevention and detection, more primary - care (family) physicians and information on emergency psychiatric services.

A public hearing on the plan is tentatively scheduled March 13, ermined time and place in Ontario before the plan can be forwarded up a complicated ladder of review leading to the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) in Washington, D.C.

The West End group is one of 17 task forces of the Inland Counties Health Systems Agency, a federally funded organization serving San Bernardino, Riverside, Inyo and Mono counties.

June Cobb, director of community affairs for the inland counties agency, explained that the inland counties are one of nine health - agency areas in California and one of 202 nationwide.

Some of the 202 agencies are actually governmental agencies that already existed, like county health departments, and some are independently created, like the inland counties agency.

At the agency's headquarters in Colton last week, Ms. Cobb and Ron-

seeks volunteers

The West End Multi Service Center is seeking volunteers to aid in various services offered by the center. Some paid positions are also in need of filling.

In the volunteer capacity, those offering their services to the center may volunteer in any capacity they desire. Senior citizens, disabled and confined persons frequently request assistance from the center for a variety of needs.

The center is also looking for persons to employ as housekeepers and sitters for senior citizens.

Volunteers are also needed to assist in the center's Christmas program for underprivileged children. Volunteers will be asked to make doll clothes, and a portion of the material will be provided.

Further information may be obtained by calling the West End Multi Service Center at 983-0775.

nie Croutcher, metro area coordinator, outlined the history of the health - planning procedures and the duties of the local task forces.

Ms. Cobb noted health costs now make up about nine percent of the gross national product and account for an increasing chunk of the national budget.

Congress passed the National Health Planning and Resources Development Act of 1974 with provisions aimed at eliminating duplication of equipment, facilities and services.

"Sometime in the last 10 years health care became a right. The Congress and the president have accepted this," Ms. Cobb said.

However, much of the equipment and facilities are expensive, driving up the cost of care. Ms. Cobb said the goal of the 1974 act was "cost containment."

Under a state counterpart of the federal law, the Inland Counties Health Systems Agency is the reviewing body making recommendations to the state Department of Health whether licenses should be issued for expensive new equipment.

Health - care administrators must receive a "certificate of need" before they can construct a new facility, increase bed capacity at an existing facility, establish a radiation therapy department, burn center or intensive care newborn nursery and provide cardiac surgery or kidney transplants.

Ms. Cobb commented, "Technology of medicine outstripping our ability to handle it is an international phenomenon."

The health systems agencies and the medical profession in general are currently reviewing minimum population standards to be met before many of these expensive facilities or services could be Wiik said the population figures would apply on both the federal and state level. While he said the task force itself is concentrating on its needs assessment, he cautioned that the proposed criteria is in its "infancy" and that "it's difficult to say" if standards are realistic.

Wiik admitted that while the task force and health systems agency have tried to bring consumers into the local planning group, the organization is composed mainly of professionals, or "providers" as they are called.

He said the task force has been meeting once a month but may start holding meetings on an "as - needed" basis.

Ms. Croutcher said providers tend to dominate most of the 17 task forces in the inland counties agency, but noted that federal guidelines mandate a majority be consumers on the governing board and subarea councils.

She said membership on the task force is open to all residents. Ms. Croutcher is one of two staff members who attend the West End meetings. Time and place of the meetings vary from month to month.

Ms. Cobb said the "grassroots" concept of the task force was important to HEW in drawing up the guidelines under the 1974 act.

Ms. Croutcher stressed that the health systems agency takes into account existing private and public institutions and works to coordinate information with them.

A renal dialysis unit to be maintained near San Antonio Community Hospital has received certificate of need and been licensed.

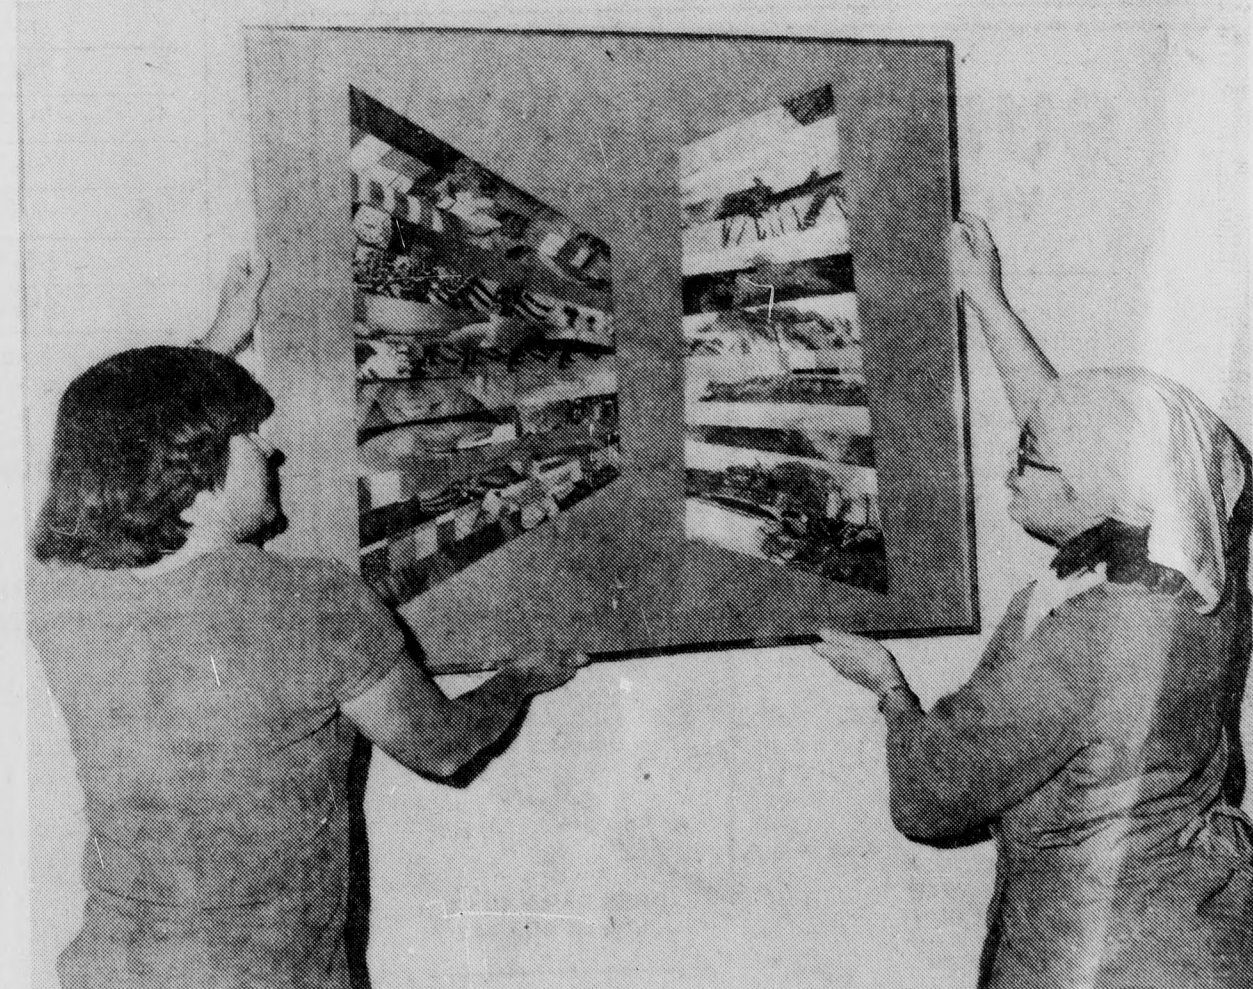

Wiik said the task force helped point out the need for the equipment to treat kidneys in the West End.

A residency requirement for voting by task force members is a controversial rule to at least one of the 20-25 group members.

Deborah Meyer, health services coordinator for the Visiting Nurses Association in Montclair, said she believes the rule is unfair. Mrs. Meyer lives in Los Angeles County.

Mrs. Meyer said a member's voting or nonvoting status determines whether the member gets any credit for the position papers the group is now writing on priority needs.

Ms. Cobb said the residency requirement is supposed to help keep health professionals from dominating consumers in task forces.

SHOES AND YOUR CHILDREN....

First Baby Shoes: Firm or Flexible?

by Harold Berk

There is much unnecessary controversy about whether the first walking shoes for baby should be flexible or should offer firm support.

From birth until the walking stage, the major need in foot covering is that it be loose and flexible - to restrict the foot as little as possible. Since no support is needed in these pre-standing and walking days, any shoes put on a baby should be of a soft-sole, flexible nature.

However, when weight-bearing starts, new conditions must be met.

Ideally, it would be nice to let a child go barefoot so that the foot could develop naturally. That is, it would be nice if the child's activities were to be carried out on grass or the sand at the beach.

The usual environment for the growing baby is not grass or beach. It is the floor of his home. Often it is the sidewalk. These hard surfaces put an additional strain on baby's feet, which can only be protected by proper footwear.

In selecting such proper footwear, foremost attention should be given to holding the foot in correct balance.

All too often we hear shoe men tell mothers that a flexible shoe is desirable at this stage. They say that it allows greater freedom of the toes and foot and, therefore, lets the muscles develop. The argument is logical on the surface, but closer investigation reveals pitfalls in this thinking.

The important role played by muscles cannot be minimized. However, the effectiveness of muscle action is entirely dependent on the structural framework of the foot. If a foot is structurally imbalanced, you are developing muscles that only promote greater imbalance. The rule, then, is that balance must be achieved before muscle development can proceed.

Considerable medical knowledge points to the fact that an inability to achieve proper balance of a young child's feet in the developmental stage is a major cause of pronation-inrolling ankles.

High shoes - or boots - may or may not be selected. The greatest benefit of high shoes are simply to help keep the shoes on the baby. Sometimes in the cases of the young child where the heel is not fully formed, high shoes help prevent slipping of the heel. High shoes also offer a certain amount of protection, but little support. Support comes from the sole up.

Groundwater suit ends complex negotiations

By PETER WONG

Three years of complex negotiations leading to a plan for controls over the pumping of Chino Basin groundwater came to a virtual close Tuesday afternoon in San Bernardino Superior Court.

After a 3½-hour hearing during which the plan's key points were outlined, Judge Howard B. Wiener said he expects to give it the court's approval Jan. 27.

On that day, after the court makes formal findings and comes to a conclusion and recommendations in the case, "I will in all likelihood sign the judgment," Wiener said.

The plan was negotiated over the past three years by the Chino Basin Municipal Water District and groups representing agricultural, industrial and municipal water users. The latter category includes cities, water companies and water districts.

Noting the complexity of the plan, Wiener asked, "Without being facetious, is there one person who understands all the ramifications of these 81 pages?"

"I wrote it and I don't understand everything," Donald D. Stark, an Irvine attorney who represents the Chino Basin Municipal Water District, replied half jokingly.

The district filed a complaint against more than 1,200 defendants back on Jan. 2, 1975, to get the negotiating process moving.

The latest count shows 1,270 defendants in the case — 1,236 agricultural or other water users, 12 industries that pump from their own wells, and 22 cities, water companies and water districts. Practically all have agreed to the plan.

"It's a job far better resolved by settlement than it ever could be resolved by trial," Wiener said.

The delay to Jan. 27 will allow attorneys to review some late changes in the language of the plan. Stark said they do not affect the plan's substance.

Most of Tuesday's hearing was devoted to testimony from two witnesses, including Fran Brommenschkel, the district official who help put the plan together.

The plan was required because more water was being pumped from the Chino Basin — the vast basin underlying practically all of the West End — than was being replaced.

An estimated 175,000 acre-feet of water is being pumped annually from the basin — 96,000 by agricultural users (54.9 percent), 9,000 by industrial users (5.1 percent) and 70,000 by municipal users (40 percent).

An acre-foot, the basic unit for measuring large quantities of water, is the volume covered by one acre to a depth of one foot — or 325,000 gallons, enough to supply a family of five for one year.

The plan says only 140,000 acre-feet of water can be pumped safely every year from the basin — 82,800 by agricultural users (59.1 percent), 7,366 by industrial users (5.3 percent) and 49,834 by municipal users (35.6 percent).

(Actually, agricultural users are limited to pumping 414,000 acre-feet from the basin over five straight years, or an average of 82,800 acre-feet annually.)

To ease the severity of the cut-backs, cities and water companies as a group will be allowed to draw an additional 5,000 acre-feet initially, bringing the group's allocation to 54,834 acre-feet.

The amount of water that can be pumped safely every year from the basin could vary as much as 10 percent from the stated figure of 140,000 acre-feet. William Carroll, president of the Pasadena firm of James M. Montgomery Consulting Engineers, testified Tuesday.

Cities and water companies will be entitled to the extra water or may have to reduce their pumping, depending upon whether the amount is changed.

Each group of agricultural, industrial and municipal water users will assess its members to enable the watermaster to pay the cost of importing supplemental water.

That water, which will be used to raise the basin's level and satisfy the West End's growing demands, will have to be transported great distances — either from Northern California, through the California Water Project, or the Colorado River Aqueduct. Reclaimed water may also be used.

NEW CROPS — If light, warm rains continue in the West End, strawberry growers will produce a bumper yield of berries this year, according to one grower in Ontario. Fields such as this one on Seventh Street just west of Mountain Avenue in Upland, were planted in late October. Full blossoms are already visible and if the weather holds, picking will begin in February, usually early for the fruit. However, between now and February, a million things could go wrong, growers explained. Heavy rains, freezes or cold rains could all ruin the crops.

Classic film series

The classic film series sponsored by the Chino Library will resume 7:30 p.m. Jan. 5.

The first film to be screened in this free series will be "Foreign Correspondent."

In this film Joel McCrea stars as a crime reporter recruited as a foreign correspondent during the period just prior to World War II. The "credible Hitchcock development" concerns McCrea's being drawn into the intrigue of international power politics and espionage.

Other films which will be shown Thursday evenings in January include: Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce in the Sherlock Holmes' classic "The Woman in Green" Jan. 12; Peter Lorre in "M," a classic mystery and horror film, Jan. 19; and a "Farewell to Arms," starring Gary Cooper, Jan. 26.

Applications for the two $500 scholarships for students majoring in liberal arts are being accepted by Delta Theta Chi Sorority, a national non-collegiate cultural sorority.

All applications are to be completed by Jan. 20, 1978, in order for the awards to be presented in early April. Applications may be obtained from Mrs. Britten at 825 Berkeley Court, Ontario, 91762.

Copies of Expo report available at libraries

Copies of the draft environmental impact statement on the proposed Expo 81 have been mailed to West End libraries, local government offices and persons who submitted written or oral testimony during the May public hearings on the World's Fair, according to the Department of Commerce.

Written comments concerning the 511-page document should be forwarded to Washington, D.C. by Feb. 13, a federal representative said.

The federal agency responsible for the environmental study said any comments or questions should be forwarded to:

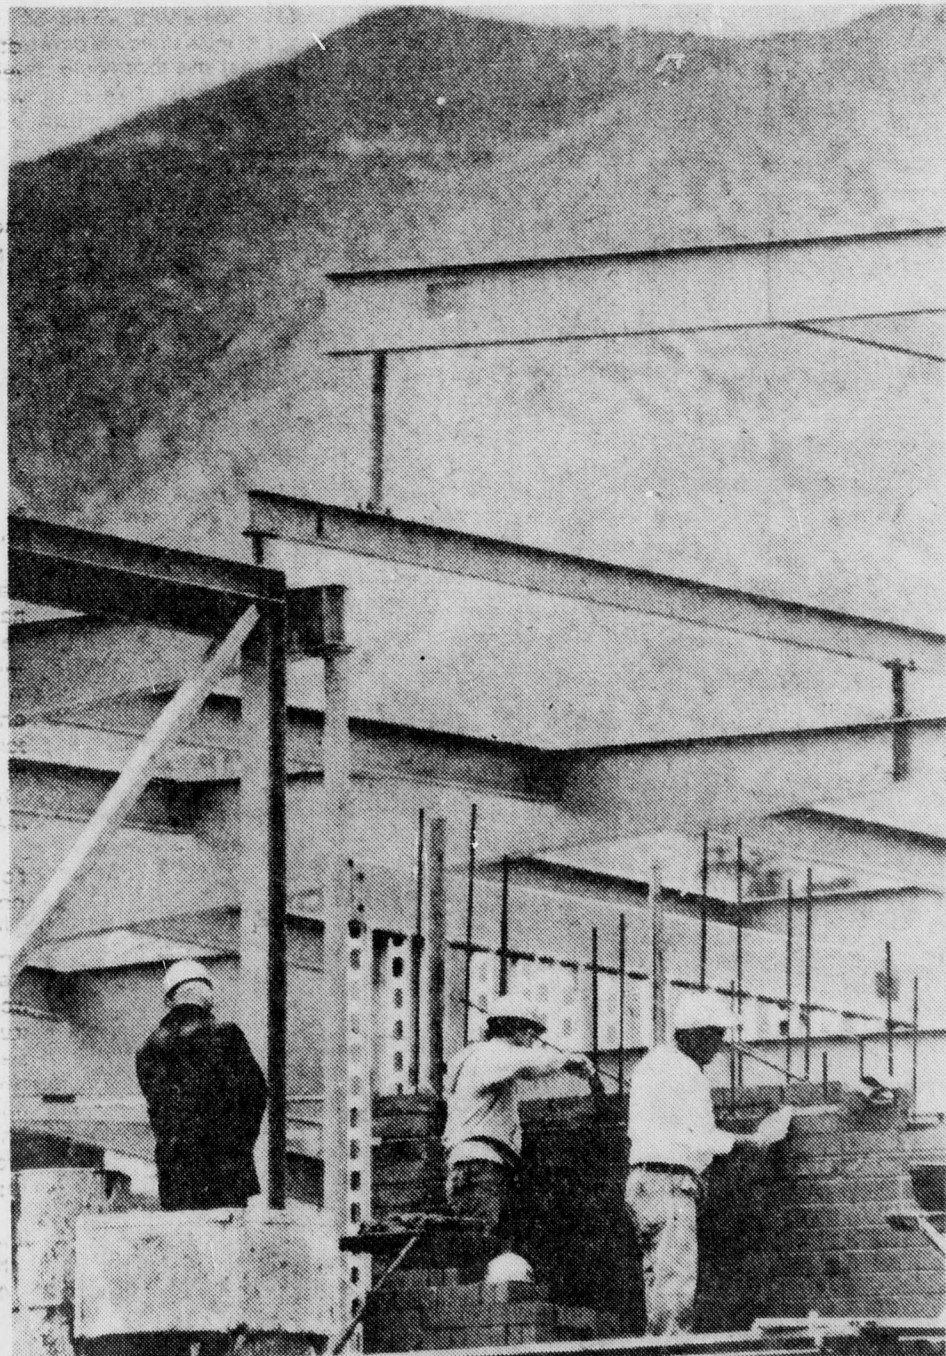

Richard H. Henry, Director, Conventions and Expositions Division, United States Travel Service, U.S. Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C. 20230. That office's telephone number is (202) 377-5211.

According to the environmental study, prepared by a Spokane,

Wash., firm under a $60,000 federal contract, a revised environmental impact statement will be issued if "a federal commitment is made regarding (funding) a federal pavilion."

The funding of a federal pavilion would only come after it was decided that President Jimmy Carter would invite foreign nations to participate in Expo 81, which is planned for Ontario Motor Speedway. Federal officials are withholding a decision on the invitations pending documentation that the Expo 81 Corp. has available the $140 million needed to stage the proposed fair, according to Henry.

Public libraries in Ontario, Upland, Pomona and Claremont are among the local libraries that have requested — and were mailed — the 511-page report, a federal official said. The libraries at several of the Claremont colleges and the Cal Poly library also were mailed copies.

VOCATIONAL ARTS — Recent rains have slowed construction of the new vocational arts building at Chaffey College. Before its arrival, however, bricklayers could be seen at work on the structure.

'Word Woman' aids kids

Dressed in a yellow cape with two large black Ws printed on front and back, Word Woman helps fourth, fifth and sixth graders at Kingsley School learn all about words and their relationship to each other.

Word Woman, better known as Nancy Poling, reading resource teacher at Kingsley, said she uses this technique to stimulate student interest in learning new words.

Poling spends every Monday afternoon each week visiting classrooms with a "Word of the Week," plus additional words for students to learn. She allows 10 minutes in each classroom for learning new words and sometimes time for reviewing words from the previous week.

According to Poling, "the children respond warmly to this concept. Words are related in many ways as I try to teach the students." She said her goal is to give them words each week that relate in some way. Once they learn word relationships, it's easier to grasp definitions.

In Edna Neumann's class recently Poling covered such words as diameter, enumerate, cacophon and elongate, in addition to others. Students are first given a chance to define the word which she has printed on large cards. Poling then explains how words can be broken down to aid understanding.

We've just made a little history. Free.

It's called "Guideposts to History," and it's yours for the asking when you drop into any of our offices during the month of January.

"Guideposts to History" is a 150-page work devoted to the origins of selected place and street names in San Bernardino and Riverside counties. This absorbing book is filled with fascinating facts and rare photos of people and locations in Southern California.

You'll discover the origins of such names as San Bernardino, Coachella, Cucamonga, and Needles.

You'll learn about the Southern California journeys of some famous Spanish priests in the 1770's. You'll also learn about the origins of the vineyards and date gardens.

Old friends are worth more.

The owner, an art major at California State University, Fullerton, has experience in commercial art and fashion illustration. Paula's Fashions is open 10 a.m. - 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. - 6 p.m. Saturday, and noon - 5 p.m. Sunday. For more information call 987-4797.

Navy contracts

Data-Design Laboratories, of Cucamonga, has received $7 million in new contracts for a U.S. Navy program, the largest total award in the company's history, according to Thomas C. Beiseker, president. The four new contracts were awarded by the Department of the Navy for the Fleet Ballistic Missile Submarine Program which includes the new Trident Weapons System. The largest is valued at $4.6 million. The contracts primarily cover a period of one year.

As a Trident team member, the company will provide strategic weapons systems training acquisition and maintenance support as the personnel program coordinator. The company is also involved in other training and documentation programs.

Achievement

Century 21 sales associates Lynn David and John Boal have been honored for sales achievement. David was presented an award recognizing $1 million in residential sales, while Boal's certificate was presented in honor of $2 million in residential sales. Both sales people are associated with Century 21 Hembree Realty Inc. in Cucamonga.

Construction

Berry Construction Co., of Upland has been awarded a $3,998,000 contract to construct the new Ontario City Hall. The contract includes construction of a 48,000-square-foot building and provides for landscaping, sidewalks, curbs, parking lots and other site work totaling $610,000. Construction is slated to be completed by early 1979.

New officers

The Baldy View Chapter of the Building Industry Association has announced new officers and board of directors for 1977-78.

The incoming president for the Baldy View Chapter is James Crowell of Crowell/Leventhal.

Incoming vice presidents are: programs, Russell Blewett, owner of Ramona Carpet; membership, Stan Sievers, Sievers & Sons; governmental affairs, Dick Scott, president of Vanguard Builders; and secretary-treasurer, Frank Hoover, president of PHD Plumbing.

The Baldy View Chapter represent builders, contractors and associate members from all over the West End and Pomona Valley.

The association headquarters is located at 9211 Archibald Ave., Cucamonga.

Promotion

C. Ken Ogg of Upland has been promoted by J.C. Penney Co. to regional sales and merchandise manager. Ogg has been associated with Penney since 1951.

when he joined the company in Reno, Nev. After various assignments, he was promoted to Los Angeles metro supervisor in 1969. Three years later, Ogg became Los Angeles District manager. In 1973, he was promoted to regional operations manager.

Salesmaster

Ruth Cales has returned to the sales staff at Herbert Hawkins Realtors in Upland after several months' leave to work on a new home tract. Recently marking her fifth year of association with the Hawkins firm, she has earned the title of "salesmaster" for two years.

Honors

Albert A. Lopez has won honors as sales leader for October at Herbert Hawkins Realtors in Upland, earning $20,000 during that 31-day period. Among many transactions, he participated in the sale of a large parcel of land in China to be developed by the Hawkins Development Division. Although he sells real estate part time, he has also earned the title of Salesmaster for 1977. He teaches at Upland Junior High School.

Service

William M. Thurlow of Alta Loma has completed 30 years of service with the General Telephone Company of California. He started with the company in 1947 as a switchman and has since held various positions in the company. He is currently supply supervisor for the firm in San Bernardino.

Real estate

VOLUNTEER RESCUE — Showing how they would administer help to a victim of a heart attack are Mike Wirtz, left, and Keith Hardcastle. Hillis Hauck poses as the victim. Hardcastle and Hauck are among the six volunteers who have formed San Antonio Fire and Emergency Rescue (SAFER), which will help regular firefighters like Wirtz provide fire protection and emergency medical service to unincorporated San Antonio Heights. The area is served by a fire station operated jointly by the California Department of Forestry and San Bernardino County.

Residents form rescue, fire team for Heights

By PETER WONG

Six volunteers are trying to increase public awareness of the department that provides fire protection and emergency medical service to the residents of unincorporated San Antonio Heights.

They have formed an organization called San Antonio Fire and Emergency Rescue (the initials spell 'SAFER') to serve the estimated 5,000 residents of the area north and west of the Upland city limits.

The volunteers' efforts will supplement those of regular firefighters assigned to the station at Euclid Avenue north of 24th Street. That station is operated jointly by the California Department of Forestry and San Bernardino County.

One reason why the volunteer organization was formed was "our concern that people in San Antonio Heights do not know who to call in case of a fire or an emergency," said Tom Garnella, the organization's president.

Starting this week, SAFER volunteers plan to distribute copies of a letter describing what services the fire department provides.

They will also distribute to the estimated 1,500 to 2,000 households a set of instructions for residents to follow in reporting a fire or other emergency.

Stickers with the numbers of the West End sheriff's substation in Ontario and the fire department emergency line will also be given to each household. They can be attached to telephones.

The emergency phone number for the fire department is 882-1717, which San Antonio Heights residents can call collect to reach the dispatcher in San Bernardino.

SAFER is seeking donations to pay for the cost of the letters, and eventually, to purchase emergency medical equipment for a round-the-clock rescue squad volunteers hope will be created someday.

Other programs SAFER is considering for the future include blood pressure clinics and fire prevention activities.

At the moment, however, the volunteers will undergo all the training of regular firefighters. They will learn how to put out fires, operate equipment and administer emergency medical treatment.

The volunteers will continue to train with regular firefighters for at least eight hours per month.

When summoned, the volunteers will go to the locations of fires and other emergencies to help regular firefighters.

Volunteers are paid the minimum wage of $2.30 per hour. They must purchase uniforms and gear out of their own pockets.

By local word of mouth, 12 prospective candidates were attracted to the new volunteer group, and as Capt. Ken Hamilton put it, "we chose the six who could do the best job."

Other members of SAFER are Keith Hardcastle, vice president; Noel Clarke, secretary-treasurer; Hillis Hauck, Tom Minnock and Tracy Smith.

The field adviser to the group is Fred Schmidt, a battalion chief, and the station adviser is Capt. John Marquiss.

The business number of the San Antonio Heights fire station is 982-2611.

PUBLIC NOTICE

RESOLUTION NO. 2809

A RESOLUTION OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF UPLAND CALLING A PUBLIC HEARING TO DETERMINE WHETHER PUBLIC NECESSITY, HEALTH, SAFETY, OR WELFARE REQUIRES THE FORMATION OF AN UNDERGROUND UTILITY DISTRICT ON MOUNTAIN AVENUE EXTENDING NORTHERLY FROM A POINT APPROXIMATELY 190 FT. NORTH OF THE CENTERLINE OF FOOTHILL BOULEVARD TO THE SOUTH SIDE OF SIXTEENTH STREET

WHEREAS, the Upland Municipal Code, Article VII, Chapter 2, Part 6 establishes a procedure for the creation of underground utility districts and requires that the initial step in such a procedure be the holding of a public hearing to ascertain whether public necessity, health, safety, or welfare requires the removal of poles, overhead wires and associated overhead structures in the underground installation of wires and facilities for supplying electric, communication or similar associated service in any such district; and

WHEREAS, it has been recommended that such an underground utility district, hereinafter called District, be formed on Mountain Avenue extending northerly from a point approximately 190 ft. north of the centerline of Foothill Blvd. to the south side of Sixteenth Street, the east-west boundaries of said district being lines drawn parallel with and 50 ft. from the centerline of Mountain Avenue, extending north from the most southerly point of said District 190 ft. north of the centerline of Foothill Blvd. to the centerline of Fourteenth Street and thence north to the south side of Sixteenth Street. The west boundary being the centerline of Mountain Avenue and the east boundary being a line drawn parallel and 50 ft. east of said centerline, except that said District shall include Lot 33 of Tract 8889 in the City of Upland, County of San Bernardino, as recorded in Map Book 125, Pages 24 and 25 of Records of said County.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the City Council of the City of Upland that:

1. Notice is hereby given that a public hearing will be held by the City Council of Upland on January 16, 1978, at 7:00 p.m., in the Council Chambers, 460 N. Euclid Avenue, Upland, California, to ascertain whether the public necessity, health, safety or welfare requires removal of poles, overhead wires and associated overhead structures and underground installation of wires and facilities for supplying electric, communication or similar associated service in the District described, except that overhead wires for 12 KVA transmission of electric power crossing said District shall be exempt from this requirement.

2. At such hearing all persons interested shall be given an opportunity to be heard. Said hearing may be continued from time to time as determined by the City Council.

3. The City Clerk shall notify all affected property owners as shown on the last equalized assessment roll and the utilities concerned of the time and place of such hearing by mailing a copy of this resolution to said persons and utilities at least ten (10) days prior to the date thereof.

4. The area proposed to be included in the District is shown upon that certain map entitled Underground Utility District No. 4, dated December 30, 1977, which is on file in the office of the City Clerk of the City of Upland.

APPROVED AND ADOPTED this 3rd day of January, 1978.

ALHS drill team to compete in Riverside

Members of the Alta Loma High School Drill Team, completing a busy fall, are looking forward to a major performance at the Riverside 500 Race Jan. 21.

So far this year, the 35 members have marched with the band in parades at Montclair, Arcadia and Pomona. The drill team placed third in the Pomona Christmas parade. In addition, they have participated in halftime shows at home football games and at several rallies during school.

Girls in drill team practice at least two hours a day in addition to their practice during physical education class. Although drill team counts as a physical education credit, members practice a great deal beyond that.

Try-outs for next year's team will be in February.

"I'm afraid that girls will decide to try out for a cheerleading position and not for drill team. Girls can try out for both, however," said Wanda Courey, advisor.

Girls buy their own uniforms, which cost $70. Miss Courey said she thinks more people would participate if the school would buy the uniforms and then pass them on.

"In some schools," she said, "such as Simi Valley, this is how it is done."

College sets art history courses

Non-credit and credit classes in art history will be offered in January at Chaffey College. Bob Smith, instructor, has announced.

Starting Tuesday, Jan. 3, and running from 7 to 10 p.m. will be the history of pre-Columbian art, and starting on Wednesday, Jan. 4, and running three days a week, will be the history of sculpture and architecture. This class will be held on Mondays from 10 to 11 a.m., Wednesdays from 9 to 11 a.m. and Fridays from 9 to 10 a.m.

All classes will be held in Forum 3, the building just behind the administration building on campus.

"Many persons of all ages, especially senior citizens, would like to study art history, but they become bogged down with the idea of having to take tests for credits when they have no use for credits," Smith said. "It was decided to offer non-credit and credit combination courses, and those on the non-credit basis would be like 'visitors' in a college program."

Wandering with Walt Brasch

A telephone? Well we have ...

America's telephone companies — they're the ones with the ding-a-lings — recently had a visit from a rather elderly gentleman who was returning to the area.

After waiting in line several minutes, he finally got to talk with the receptionist.

"I'd like to order a telephone," he said.

"Business or private?" she asked.

This baffled him. "I just want a telephone."

"I'm sorry sir, but before I can send you to the right department, I must know whether it's for business or pleasure."

He thought about it a few moments, then asked, "How much is it?"

"The private telephone is $5.45 per month. The business telephone is $7.25 per month."

It didn't take a calculator for the man to figure out that he was going to get a private, personal telephone. So, he declared his intention and was ushered into another line where he took a number and patiently awaited his turn.

"Good morning, sir," the customer service representative greeted him.

"Where did you previously live?"

He didn't understand the reason for the question, but politely answered, "Boston."

"And your name, sir?"

"Bell, ma'am. Alexander Graham Bell. I'm here for only a little while and I thought I would have a telephone installed so I could talk with my friends, just like in the old days."

"Well, Mr. Bell," the sweet young representative said, "we'll just make a quick check with your previous phone company and see if you're currently on your bill."

A few minutes later, she sadly informed him, "It seems that the other telephone company — a very small outfit in Boston — says that you last paid your bill in 1922. That's a little far back isn't it?"

He tried to explain, "Well, ma'am, I didn't really have any need for a telephone after 1922. And I always paid my bills on time."

The young woman was visibly upset. "How can you exist without a telephone?"

"Where I was, telephones just weren't needed."

So, the customer service representative greeted him.

representative skeptically jotted down a couple of notations and asked him what kind of telephone he wanted.

"A personal one," he said again.

"No, no," she corrected him. "Do you want push-button or dial?"

He stared at her blankly. "I just want to pick up the telephone and call the operator and have her connect me with my party. Which one does that?"

"Sir, now you can dial your party without an operator. It's cheaper that way."

"No operator? No friendly voice at the other end?" He was upset.

"On long-distance calls, we have operators — but they're only if you have trouble. Now, would you like a push-button or a dial?"

He just looked at her until she explained the difference. He selected a push-button.

"Fine. That'll only be another $1.25 per month. Now, what about the model. We have your standard desk phone, as well as a Styleline, a Starlite, an executive chestphone, a Mediterranean cradlephone, and a Mickey Mouse phone."

"I just want a telephone that lets me talk with my friends." He looked at row after row of sample telephones, then selected a Styleline model.

"A fine choice. And it's only $2.35 more per month. Now, about the color for your telephone?"

"Will it cost me anything?"

"Oh, no. Color is free."

"In that case, I'd like black. I've always had a black telephone."

The customer service representative frowned. "Black? I'm not sure we have black."

She checked through her list. "We have candy apple, tangerine, sunny yellow, lemonade, autumn gold, avocado, tropic green, white, ivory, espresso brown —"

Before she could finish, he asked if she had blue.

"Yes, sir. Would that be electric blue or porcelain blue?"

"Blue. I just want blue. Don't you have blue?"

The young lady tried to explain that there was no such color as blue — it's "electric blue or porcelain blue."

So, he selected electric blue, amazed at the technology in the telephone business.

"Now, Mr. Bell, how about a cord?"

"I thought all telephones had cords. Mine back in Boston always had a cord."

"Yes, that's another convenience we in the phone company give you. But, wouldn't you like just a little longer cord?"

Something that willow you to carry your telephone throughout the room?"

"O.K., give me a long cord."

"Will that be the 14-foot cord or the 25-foot cord?"

"How much?" he asked, resigned to what was about to happen.

"Oh, the 14-foot cord is only $7.50, and the 25-foot cord is only $10 and it's a one-time charge. I assume you'd like the 25-foot cord?"

He nodded, defeated. "I hope that's the end of it," he said.

"Oh, yes, sir... Oh, by the way, are you an active individual? Do many people call you?"

"Not for quite some time. And then, it was usually Watson. But I do expect some more phone calls."

Her eyes lit up. "Well, Mr. Bell, if you're busy, you'd want an extension phone in your house. We recommend one in the bedroom and one in the kitchen. That way you won't miss any important calls while you're in another room and can't get to the phone in time."

"Might as well have one for the bathroom," he said, expecting the young lady to add more figures to his bill. He wasn't disappointed.

"Three extensions — that comes to another $3.60 per month. You won't regret it. Now, have you seen our pocket beeper? It's the latest for the busy executive. Everyone has one. Whenever you have an important message, your office — no matter where you are — can beep you and connect you to whomever is calling."

"My goodness, we have plumbers and lawyers and teachers and used car salesmen and all kinds of important people who have beepers. And it's only $20 a month."

He passed up his chance to wear a beeper.

"Now," said the lady, "would you like your name in the telephone directory?"

He agreed, thinking that telephone directories made a lot of sense. "How much is it?"

"Oh, that's free."

"Are you sure?"

"Positive."

"O.K., then put my name in the telephone directory."

"How much?" "Would you like it to be in bold-face?"

"I don't know, that's another department," she confessed.

"And what if I don't want my name in the telephone directory?" Would I have to pay for that?" He should have known better.

"Oh, my, yes. If you don't want your name in the telephone directory, you have to pay 15 cents a month. A lot of phone companies charge much more."

"I see," he said, trying to understand the workings of the modern telephone system. "If you put my name in the directory, it's free. If it's in boldface, it costs more money, but you don't know much how much. And, if I don't want it in the directory at all, you charge me for not putting it in. Makes sense to me."

"Now Mr. Bell," the representative said sweetly, "should you wish to know a telephone number that isn't in the directory, you can call information and a recorded message will tell you to look it up in the directory."

"Sounds as logical as anything I've heard today. But what if it isn't in the directory?"

"Then you don't have to pay for it."

"Pay? For what?"

"For having someone look up a number in the directory."

"But if it isn't there in the first place —"

"That's a very good question. Now, is there anything else you'd like with your telephone? A nightlight? An answering device? Maybe a gold-plated cover for the handle? How about a chime instead of a ring? We also have buzz and gong available if you don't like rings?"

"No, that's sufficient. I just want a telephone. Like the one I used to have."

He thought a moment. "But I guess that's not possible is it?"

The lady shook her head, and began figuring costs. "Let's see, we have $5.45 for a basic charge, plus another $1.25 for push-button, plus $2.35 for Styleline model, plus $10 for the cord, and another $3.60 for the extensions, plus the installation charge — that's only $19.50. Then, we have to add —"

By now, Bell was getting a bit upset. "And tell me, young lady — with the nice — smile, if I don't want to have a telephone, how much will that cost me?"

Without batting an eyelash, she calmly said that it wouldn't be too expensive, but he'd have to wait in another line.

Entertainment review

Celebrate ice holiday

By Valerie Estrada
Now that the holiday season is over and the new year has begun, maybe it's time to start thinking about a holiday of a different sort. Holiday on Ice which opened at the Forum Tuesday and continues until Jan. 15, is surely one of the holidays to participate in.

Ice skating never seemed so entertaining as it does in Holiday on Ice. A rousing audience enjoyed the 2½ hour show on opening night in the Southland Dec. 27 at Anaheim Convention Center.

Billed as the star of the show, 1976 Olympics silver medalist Dianne deLeeuw put in a lackluster performance that belongs before an Olympic crowd more than an audience expecting to be entertained.

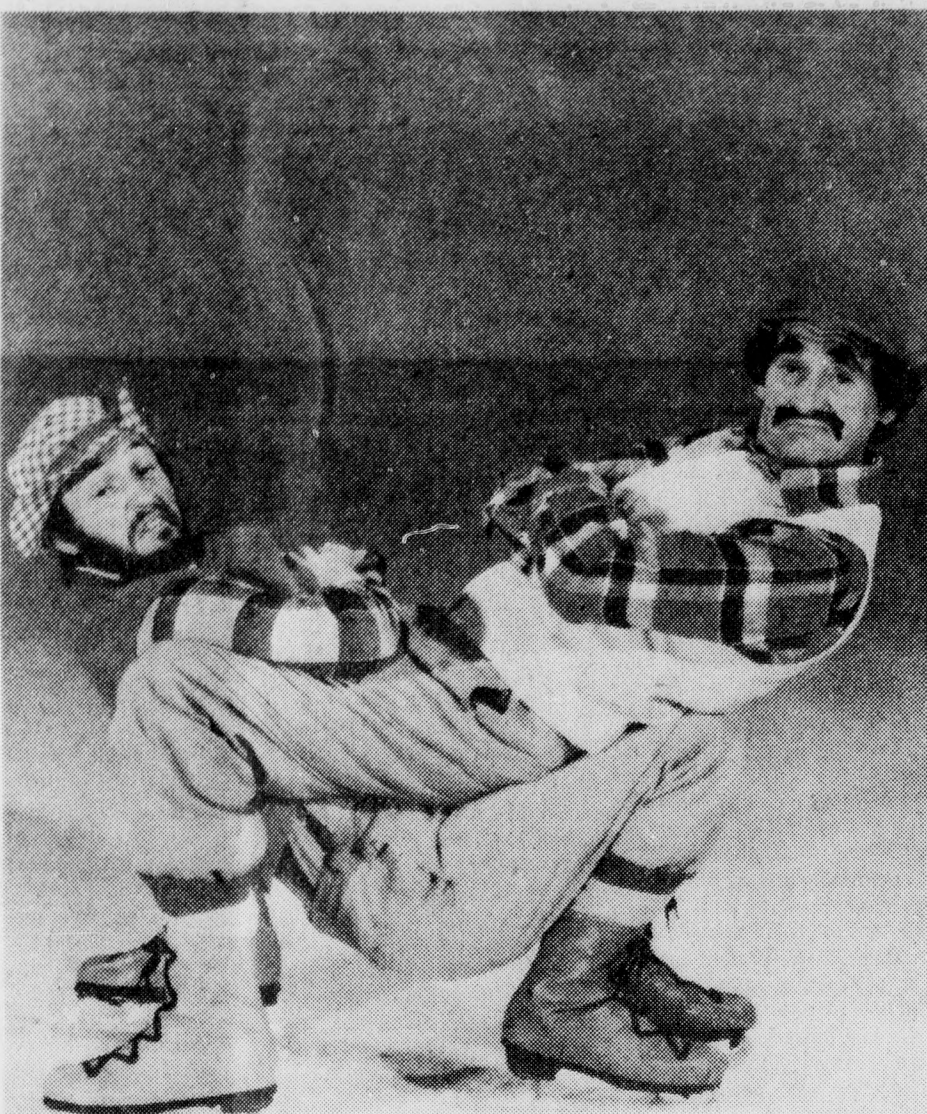

Miss deLeeuw's two performances on ice were beautiful from an artistic ice skating point of view and proved that she truly is one of this country's best female ice skaters, but she had better put more punch into her act if she expects to win over audiences who seek entertainment.

Probably the best soloist in the company is six-foot, two-inch Jackie Davis. This is his second tour with the company, but it seems like he belongs in front of an audience. Another audience pleaser was Jimmy Crockett who definitely has to be one of ice skating's fastest spinners.

The zany antics of Sesame Street characters delighted all the youngsters, and some of them were taken on a ride on the ice in row boats. Children as well as parents enjoyed the comic routine of Biddy and Baddy, and the cuteness of the ice-skating Baker family.

It all is here in Holiday on Ice: daredevils jump through rings of fire and mechanical jaws, and lavish productions depict such scenes as Hawaii, Floradora Days, a Swing Waltz and Century III.

Tickets for Holiday on Ice, ranging from $4 - $7, are available at most agencies. During weeknights youngsters, 14 years old and younger, are half price. The show plays through Jan. 15 at the Inglewood Forum.

ICE COMICS — Steve Pedley and Gigi Percelly clown around as two duck hunters in Holiday on Ice through Jan. 16 at the Inglewood Forum.

Pictorial essay program slated

The first program for the New Year of 1977 at the Chaffey Communities Cultural Center, Upland, will be on Sunday, Jan. 15, at 3 p.m. when Robert Rayburn presents a pictorial essay of the Graber Olive House of Ontario.

Rayburn is a member of the Eculid Avenue Camera Club, and his slides will give the story of the development of olives in the area.

On Feb. 26 at 1 p.m., the annual craft show will be held. Interested persons are asked to bring their handmade items for display.

The center's museum is open Monday, Wednesday and Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. Volunteers are needed to staff the afternoons. On program days, the museum opens at 1 p.m. so those attending may browse.

Pilots to hold third annual valley air fair

The third annual Pomona Valley Air Fair will be held 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Jan. 7 and 8.

Sponsored by the Pomona Valley Pilots Association, a non-profit organization, the event will take place at Cable Airport, 13th Street and Benson Avenue, Upland.

Purpose of the air fair is to acquaint the public with the accomplishments and benefits of general aviation. Statistic displays and flying demonstrations will include modern, antique, classic, and experimental flying machines. Manufacturer Ken Brock will demonstrate his gyrocopter. Hans Linke will fly a German Kestrel sailplane and Byron Alexander his Super-Falke motorglider. A motorized hang glider will be demonstrated. Charles Gyenes will give flying demonstrations in his Wilga (Polish) STOL plane and the Sportavia motorglider.

Lange to appear at women's day

Kelly Lange, TV Channel 4 newscaster, will be the keynote speaker for the annual Women's Day at Mt. San Antonio College, Walnut on Saturday, Jan. 7.

Ivy Bottini, a feminist comedienne, will be the featured luncheon speaker for the day-long event.

Lange, who will speak about "Your Inner Power," began her television career reporting traffic and weather from a helicopter. She now is co-anchor newscaster for KNBC's evening news program and co-hosts the 90-minute "Sunday" show.

Bottini will present her "Many Faces of Women," which she calls "visual consciousness raising," and a college spokesman said, "Her talk is one of the funniest, most irreverent, thought-provoking skits around."

Five workshops will be presented from 10:30 a.m. to noon at the Student Center on campus.

Pam Jones, psychiatric technician at Foothill Community Mental Health Center, will discuss "Bringing Crimes Out of the Closet."

"Where Are We With the Equal Rights Amendment?" will be the topic for Pat Salafia, League of Women Voters. Lange will hold an open workshop on all concerns of women.

Pat Cook, Cerritos College Career Center director, will cover "Getting a Job," with specific information on resumes, applications, job interviews and job availability.

The final workshop of the morning will present the programs and services available at Mt. San Antonio College, including admissions, counseling, registration, financial aids, special programs, degree courses and women's studies program.

All participants are asked to bring their own lunches. Coffee and punch will be provided by the Associated Students.

Further information is available by calling the Student Activities office, 598-2811, extension 353.

BACKPACKERS — Mike Gillen and his backpacking dog Sam prepare to climb Yellowstone National Park peak in Wyoming. The park, along with manufacturers of camping equipment and clothing, will be among exhibitors at the Sports, Vacation and Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 7-15 at Anaheim Convention Center. Highlights of the show include continuous showing of 50 color travel films.

SHERLOCK TYMES

AND

"The cast of The Invisible Thief".

You miserable cad! Today's your lucky day! I'm not looking for an ordinary villain like you. There's a despicable thief about who's silently robbing people of untold dollars every year. He threatens the very well-being and comfort of us all!

EGADS, WATSON, ITS WORSE THAN I THOUGHT! Judging by this clue of the lost dollar, the villain is our old arch enemy MR. INFLATION! A scoundrel that one!

BUT... we never give up, eh Watson? We know there has to be an elementary solution to this distardly scoundrel who unmercifully puts his victims in a pinch month after month.

By Jove! we're getting somewhere. Look Here, Watson! Someone has come up with a formula to meet that villain Mr. Inflation, head on.

Egads! This could be the biggest victory of my illustrious career.

How To Insulate

Insulation Ratings
Insulating materials have efficiency ratings that indicate how well they resist heat loss and summer heat gain. These ratings are called R-values. The higher the R-number, the better the insulation. Thickness in inches, because a thinner material may absorb more heat.

How Much Insulation To Use
You can figure out the amount of insulation you'll need by multiplying the length of the area by the width (e.g., 10 feet long X 9 feet wide = 90 square feet), then making allowances for the space taken up by joists or studs. Follow this formula:

If joists are 16 inches apart
54 square feet X .90 = 48.6 square feet

If joists are 24 inches apart
54 square feet X .94 = 50.76 square feet

The answer in either case gives you the number of square feet of insulation you'll need.
Mineral wool batts are available.

EUREKA!

We've done it, Watson! It's the weapon we've been looking for! COMMON CENTS. A superlative monthly magazine with helpful hints for the consumer on all sorts of money-managing. Look, Watson, it has articles on food, cars, stereos, furniture, banking, homes and even towels to mention a few. SENSATIONAL! Now every homemaker can fight the wiles of Mr. Inflation!

Bravo! Mr. Tymes

Simplified system begun for air quality warnings

By PETER WONG

Because of a new format for smog reports, valley residents will have to get used to hearing local air quality described as "unhealthy," "very unhealthy," even "hazardous" — and maybe once in a while, "good."

Use of the simplified system, begun last month by the South Coast Air Quality Management District, Southern California's smog control agency, has prompted a great deal of public comment.

Levels of smog have been expressed in terms of pollutants per million parts of air. They will now be described by numbers on a scale known as the pollutant standards index.

Separate ratings will be issued for inland valleys, metropolitan and coastal areas in the four-county district.

"It's to relate to the public in terms of what the air is like outside," William E. Falkner, the district's information officer, said Wednesday. "It's a definitive statement... of a level of pollution."

The categories that describe the levels of air quality and the numbers that will be used to indicate them are as follows:

— Good (on the pollutant standards index, from 0 to 100, the latter representing the federal air quality standard). In the present system, that is expressed as .10 parts of oxidant per million. No special health precautions are advised.

— Unhealthy (101 to 199). Although ratings in this category indicate a violation of air quality standards, they will not normally trigger first-stage smog alerts. However, persons with heart or respiratory ailments would be warned to curtail their activity.

— Very unhealthy (200 to 299). Ratings in this category would prompt the calling of first-stage smog alerts, and above 280, second-stage alerts. At these levels, air pollution would affect most healthy people and significantly affect those with heart or respiratory ailments.

— Hazardous (300-500) Although ratings in this category are considered unlikely, they would trigger the calling of a third-stage smog alert and mandatory measures to curtail most activity.

One unintended impact of the new reporting system may make the public aware of the difference between the federal air quality standard — which is currently exceeded frequently, particularly in the West End — and the first-stage smog alert level.

The new system is being started in Southern California six months before the federal government is requiring it nationwide "because we want to see how this program (of smog reporting) works," Falkner said.

In enacting the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1977, Congress said it wanted a uniform national system of reporting air quality to the public, "and we are taking the lead," he added.

The terms used to describe air quality — good, unhealthy, very unhealthy and hazardous — are mandated by the legislation, Falkner said.

Another representative of the regional district said the system previously used in Southern California to describe air quality to the public "was like a foreign language," particularly to those from outside the area.

At first, the new pollutant standards index will take into account only the levels of oxidant in Southern California's skies, Falkner said.

The photochemical smog common in Southern California, created when hydrocarbons and oxides of nitrogen react chemically with sunlight, is usually expressed in terms of oxidant.

Falkner said use of the new index will not change the district's standards for calling alerts.

A first-stage smog alert, known as a "health advisory," is called when the level of oxidant reaches .20 parts per million. That is equivalent to 205 on the new index, or within the "very unhealthy" category of air quality.

A second-stage alert is called when the level of oxidant reaches .35 parts per million, or 280 on the new index. A third-stage alert is called at .50 parts per million, the last such alert being issued in 1973. This is equivalent to 420 on the new index.

When second- and third-stage alerts are called or predicted, the district can take steps to curtail various activities in the South Coast air basin to protect the public.

Falkner said the new system has evolved from previous smog reporting systems. Among them were:

— The use of colors (green, blue and red) to designate the severity of air pollution, red being the most serious. "People were looking for 'red smog,'" Falkner said.

— The use of such adjectives as "light," "moderate" and "heavy" to describe smog levels, which Falkner called "subjective." For awhile, even smog was termed "eye irritation."

— The use of pollutants per million parts of air to describe smog levels, which often appeared technical and complicated to understand.

State changes debt collecting

By Bill McVittie

For millions of Californians, the buy-now-pay-later syndrome has become a way of life. In many households mounting debts have increased the need to borrow money from banks or lending institutions to fulfill credit obligations.

Collecting overdue debts can be a tedious process often leading to pushy, unethical practices by creditors trying to get their money. As a result, the owing consumer is sometimes denied a fair share of privacy and peace of mind.

According to the state Department of Consumer Affairs, within the last year there has been a substantial increase in the number of complaints lodged by consumers against various collection agencies.

Complaints have included such tactics as the use, or threat of physical force and obscene language, calling people in the middle of the night, and harassing debtors at work.

Mounting concern by both the legislature and the Department of Consumer Affairs about such abuses has resulted in major reforms intended to protect the consumer against unfair treatment.

Last year, the Department of Consumer Affairs' Bureau of Collection and Investigative Services, which licenses and regulates collection agencies, instituted a new set of regulations designed to control collection practices.

This year, legislation to end deceptive practices was signed into law.

The measure, called the "Robbins-Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act" gives added protection to consumers and establishes tough guidelines that must be followed by all debt collection agencies.

These guidelines include: — Prohibitions against unethical or deceptive collection practices.

— Prohibitions against harassment of alleged debtors at their place of employment.

— Requirements that all written notices from collectors come from the collection agency and do not appear on government or other official documents. — Prohibitions against the use, or threat of physical force and the use of obscene language.

A violation of the Fair Debt Collection Act allows the debtor to bring civil action for actual damages. Serious violations can also result in the revocation of an agency's license.

Also contained in the measure is language that establishes certain responsibilities for debtors, and if willfully violated, can result in action against the debtor.

It is essential for both parties involved to adhere to honest and professional treatment.

(Bill McVittie, a Democrat, is state assemblyman from the 65th district, which includes Upland, Montclair, and the Red Hill section of Rancho Cucamonga.)

Travel booklet helps elderly, handicapped

Making air travel a bit easier and more convenient for handicapped and elderly persons is the aim of a new guidebook published by the Department of Transportation's Federal Aviation Administration.

"Access Travel: Airports" lists design features, facilities and services that meet the travel needs of the wheelchair-bound, the blind, the deaf and the aged at 220 airport terminals in 27 countries.

For each terminal, the 20-

Single, free copies of the guide are available from the Consumer Information Center, Department 691F, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Organizations requesting more than single copies should write, citing quantity, use and justification: Office of Public Affairs, APA-400, Federal Aviation Administration, 800 Independence Ave., SW, Washington, D.C. 20591.

Unpaid tickets will add to license fees

A California Vehicle Code amendment to take effect Jan. 1 is expected to curb Californians' inclinations to avoid paying parking tickets.

A 1975 law signed by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., and a later amendment will bring about significant changes in the way municipal and justice courts handle parking violations.

No longer will warrants be issued for the arrest of scofflaws who let parking violations slide. Starting in January, unpaid parking tickets will be tabulated by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

The amount of the fine plus a $2 administrative fee will be added to the violator's annual registration fee. The registration will not be renewed until an individual's pending parking claims have been settled.

Currently, a person receiving a parking notice may choose to post and forfeit the bail on a parking case. In West End cities, this can be accomplished through the mail.

Parking tickets can be contested if the defendant appears in court following the filing of a formal complaint by the city.

If he does not appear in court, or fails to pay the $5 bail, the city waits for a short period of time and then files a complaint with the court.

Complaints are held by the court for a 15-day period during which the violation may be disposed of. After that, however, if no appearance is made by the violator, a warrant of arrest is issued and bail is usually increased from $5 to $10.

Under the new procedure, the process will remain the same up to the point where the city files a formal complaint with the court.

In place of issuing a warrant of arrest, the court, beginning Jan. 1, will file a notice of "non-compliance" with the DMV.

The violator will still have the option of going back to court at that point to clear up the ticket, after which a notice would be sent to the DMV.

Quarterly, the DMV will forward to the courts the fines collected on parking violations occurring within each court's jurisdiction.

The money thereafter is distributed to the individual cities or the county, depending on where the violation occurred.

The change in the law was originally proposed and supported by law enforcement agencies as a means of coping with the thousands of parking warrants issued annually by the courts which faced little prospect of ever being served.

Office ensures citizen privacy rights

By Leonard Grimes
State and Consumer
Services Agency

Californians who want to see what information state government maintains on them now have two important aids. By dialing a toll-free number, they will be connected with the state's new Office of Information Practices. The office, part of the state Personnel Board, has a trained staff available to answer questions, help cut through red tape, and ensure that Californians are able to exercise their right to privacy.

The California Constitution includes privacy as one of the inalienable rights of all its citizens.

Because of the increasing sophistication of information-gathering technology, legitimate concerns have been raised regarding appropriate safeguards to protect individual rights.

The existence of government files or records is not in itself harmful. It is how the personal information they contain is used and who has access to it that presents a potential threat to privacy.

The Brown administration has taken two important steps to provide substantial safeguards for this right to privacy and to ensure access to information contained in state files. Late last year, the governor issued an executive order which opened the files of most state agencies to individuals requesting access, and established procedures to regulate the collection, use, and transfer of personal information.

The governor has signed into law the Information Practices Act of 1977 which extends the provisions of the executive order to all state agencies except the legislature, the courts, and the Compensation Insurance Fund.

We've set up the Office of Information Practices to provide general oversight for the new law and to assist individuals who have problems or questions regarding access to their files.

Of course the agency that maintains the file should be the first place to contact — either their nearest office or their headquarters. But if this doesn't help, or they aren't sure where to go, then the Office of Information Practices can be of assistance. There is bound to be some confusion and we simply do not want the privacy program to get mired in the bureaucracy.

To make it easier to contact the Office a toll-free number, (1-800) 952-5562, has been installed.

The agency is planning other steps to publicize the new law and the protection it offers — unlike the federal government which did not publicize its efforts in this area.

An informed public is crucial to the success of this kind of program. The use of such services as the toll-free number signals a sincere desire on the part of this administration to open up government and bring it closer to the people.

Law changes license fees for disabled

Disabled Californians who own and operate passenger vehicles for their own use may now pay lower automobile license fees.

The bill, AB 822 (Mori, D-Pleasanton), signed by Governor Edmund G. Brown, Jr., provides that disabled people no longer will have to pay that part of their license fee based on costs over $200 to modify the vehicle for their own use.

In the past it was common for a disabled person who purchased a van for $6,000 and paid another $6,000 to alter it to pay a license fee based on the total cost of $12,000. Under the new law, the cost to modify passenger vehicles for use by disabled persons will be excluded from the license fee.

A Woman Ought To Know

Second income necessary

Dear Anita,

I remember that in the Great Depression of the 'thirties, women quit their jobs like schoolteaching so more men could be employed. Can you tell my why men allow their wives to work today when jobs are scarce?

D.J., San Jose

Dear D.J.,

Today we are being hurt not only by insufficient dollar income but by inflation as well. Families are solving the problem through a second income. Rather than moonlighting and exhausting themselves, men are quite willing that women take a job.

"Hard evidence is developing all over the economic landscape that women going to work — part time as well as full time — are saving jobs for men," he tells his audiences.

He argues that women are creating purchasing power which is keeping businesses from going broke — and therefore keeping businessmen working.

The fact is, of course, that without that second income, many more households would be at the poverty level. As it is, consumer debt is rising and consumer spending is not. Where families have only one breadwinner, man or woman, most are near or below the poverty line.

So working is not a luxury women indulge in. Working women do so out of necessity.

Dear Anita,

I am determined to reach the top management level of my company. But the few women who have "made it" refuse even to associate with me. Why is it that successful women seem unwilling to help others?

J.V., Escondido

Dear J.V.,

Women are only beginning to realize that in helping other women up the career ladder, they are helping themselves. It may be novel to be the only woman on an all - male board, but most women enjoy mixed company for a steady diet.

Women who have been highly successful in the past usually regarded themselves as somehow special. They suffered from the "Queen Bee" syndrome.

But this kind of anti-feminism is disappearing. It's not quite so popular to say in feminine company that you "prefer not to work for a woman." The woman you work for may confer just as much status upon you as a man.

Women are changing this attitude nowadays. They generally realize that by supporting each other they gain allies. They are competitive, but they use that energy to better themselves rather than to put down others.

If you're not getting ahead, work harder than the men around you and ask for more responsibility. Then ask for the salary to compensate for it.

If you still don't get results, try a more promising job. And take help from either men or women — it's not gender but humanity that counts.

Dear Anita,

Several rapes have been committed in my neighborhood. I know most women don't like to think it can happen to them. But if it does, what should a woman do?

L.T., Los Angeles

Dear L.T.,

The first thing to remember is to keep all the evidence — including that on your body. Don't wash up. Don't discard your clothing.

Contact the police, sheriff or a local law enforcement agency and seek emergency medical treatment immediately. When you enter the hospital, tell the doctor exactly what happened and undergo all necessary tests.

It may be easier for you to be interviewed if you are accompanied by a sympathetic friend or counselor from your local rape crisis center.

You can ask for a woman investigator when you report the rape, if you wish to. Most law enforcement agencies in California try to provide a woman officer.

You will be asked to repeat your story to a deputy district attorney, and you will be a witness for the prosecution. You should get your own attorney if you wish.

You cannot be asked about your past sexual experiences in court. Other laws, too, have changed so that at rape trials you are not treated as the "guilty" person.

Most people are beginning to understand that rape is an assault and should be treated as one. Perhaps we should work to see that rape is legally regarded as assault.
